2. What was the best aspect of the course?

What was the best aspect of the course?

The project, it had a good structure
The amount of new things to learn.

3. What improvements would you suggest?

What improvements would you suggest?

Not to have a deadline for the homework before you've gone through everything that is in the homework, as it was now with the convection part of the homework now. If the homework is supposed to be handed in during the the first half of the course, then maybe it is better to only have homework on the first part of the course? Otherwise there will be change of deadlines and that adds stress and focus form the lab that follows the homework.

Comments

The lab report being graded put a significant amount of pressure on me. Its deadline being one week before the exam was still a bit too late or too early for me.

6. The course prerequisites were sufficient to follow the course

Comments

The Q-vector was used to explain the semi-geostrophic theory, that was kind of confusing. We've gone through it in one of the basic courses, but not in detail so it might actually make it more confusing rather than help.

7. The course material (literature, lecture notes, e-resources etc) helped me in my work with the students

Comments

Working with written notes is a bit harder than digital texts, but it was fine.

When you read it was ok, and it worked when you didn't read also (not always though).

I personally had difficulties with following sometimes, but the teacher did it well and tried to make sure we understood everything.

10. Were the home assignments useful?

Were the home assignments useful?

The homework was, apart from the change of deadline, and also the part about playing with the simulation.

Yes, I would've even liked to do one more.
